How CHILD Helps Me

Have you ever been in a program that really prepares you for middle school, gives you lots of responsibility, and teaches you to cooperate with classmates? Well, I have. The program is called Project CHILD. I am going to state how Project CHILD helps me!

One reason is that Project CHILD prepares me for middle school. There are tons of reasons why CHILD prepares me for middle school but I am only going to name three. One, CHILD gives me extra practice work for billions of skills. Two, it builds up character and a lot of worthy friendships. Three, I transfer from class to class just like middle school!

I have to say CHILD also helps me build responsibility. Like I declared, there are tons of reasons why you and I should learn responsibility. I will try to name some responsibility things CHILD wants you to know; turn in homework on time, have all supplies needed, work to finish all of your school and home work!

Last but not quite least, CHILD teaches you to cooperate with classmates. What I mean by cooperate is to get along and have a pleasant friendship with classmates. You can share supplies, share paper, and help friends when they need help.

In summary, CHILD can prepare you for middle school, give you lots of responsibilities, and teaches you how to cooperate with classmates. So CHILD can help you in different ways. CHILD can also be a perfect project for YOUR child and school.
